Kazakh banking sector developments:

P&L

The Kazakh Banking sector is showing a net loss for 10 months of 2009 (starting from February). The net loss of Kazakhstan's commercial banks increased by 3.6% MoM and amounted to US$19,637 million in the first eleven months of 2009. The reason for the net loss is an increase in provisions for possible losses. The income before provisions amounted to US$ 853 million.

Kazakh commercial banks' aggregate earnings amounted to US$ 43,979 million. The aggregate expenses of the banking system (including corporate tax) was US$ 63,617 million, the majority of which were provision charges.

The sector's Net Interest Margin declined from 5.8% at YE2008 to 3.1% as at 1 December 2009, due to a slowdown in Net Interest income growth .

The Cost-to-income ratio increased during 11 months of 2009 due to higher growth in operating expenses compared to operating income. This ratio amounted to 64.6% as of 1 December 2009.

The ratio of interest income to interest expense decreased during 2009 due to the decline in business activity and decreased bank asset quality deterioration. This ratio decreased from 151% at 1 November 2009 to 149% as of 1 December 2009.

CAPITAL

The Kazakh banking sector's aggregate capital remains under pressure due to the banks continued use of Net Income to create provisions. As of 1 December 2009 the aggregate capital amounted to US$ –7,218 million, mainly due to losses by a number of banks. Excluding these losses, the aggregate bank capital amounted to US$ 6,851 million.

ASSETS

Aggregate bank assets slightly decreased during November, by 1.9%, and stood at US$77,722 million.

The decline in banking assets during November was caused by the decline in correspondent accounts and banks' deposits, which in turn was caused by the outflow of customer deposits and the bank's foreign debt redemptions. As a result, the share of highly liquid assets in the bank's total assets decreased from 10.7% as at 1 November 2009 to 9.3% as at 1 December 2009.

Correspondent accounts decreased by 20% and amounted to US$ 5,525 million.

The Securities portfolio increased by 7.4% and amounted to US$ 9,920 million as of 1 December 2009.

Inter-bank loans and deposits decreased by 25% and amounted to US$ 3,105 million.

The volume of aggregate banking assets has been widely affected by the decline in loans to customers. However, the decrease in gross loans during November was insignificant and was under 1%. In nominal terms the aggregate banking assets amounted to US$ 66,161 million.

The continuing monthly deterioration of asset quality remains the major concern of the banks. According to the FSA, Loans that were at least 90 days overdue represented 20.6% of the total loan portfolio as at 1 December 2009 compared to 19.7% as at 1 November 2009. However, the NPLs growth rate slowed down compared to previous months (during October this figure grew from 17.5% to 19.7%).

The 90 days overdue loans, excluding BTA and Alliance Bank, amounted to 17.9% as at 1 December 2009 (17.3% as at 1 November 2009).

The loan loss provisioning rate increased from 37.2% at October-end to 37.9% in November or from US$ 24,767 million to US$ 25,078 million, according to the FSA.

LIABILITIES

Aggregate bank liabilities decreased by 2.5% during November, to US$ 84,940 million.

The structure of liabilities has not changed significantly. The major funding sources remain customer accounts (47.2% of total liabilities), deposits of SPVs (15.5%), issued securities and subordinated debt (14.7%).

Customer accounts decreased by 2.4% to US$ 40,057 million, due to the decrease in corporate accounts by 4.9% or by US$ 1,932 million. However, retail deposits increased by 1.8% (US$ 224 million) during November and amounted to US$ 12,442 million.

The sector's loan-to-deposit ratio increased from 159.3% in October to 162.5% in November, due to a decrease in deposits.

Deposits of SPVs decreased by 7.4% or US$ 1,052 million, due to the repayment of foreign debt by the banks.
